Fact sheet – English as an Additional Language/Dialect (EALD) education

If your child speaks a language other than English as their first language, learning English is essential for success at school and further education, training and employment.

The New South Wales Department of Education provides English as an Additional Language or Dialect (EAL/D) support to develop English language competence so your child can fully participate in schooling and independently pursue further education and training. The department provides EAL/D support in primary schools, high schools, Intensive English Centres (IECs) and the Intensive English High School (IEHS). The availability of EAL/D support within primary schools and high schools will vary between schools, and will depend on the number of EAL/D students enrolled, and resources available.

Newly arrived students

If your child recently arrived in Australia and is in the early stages of learning English, they may be eligible for short-term intensive English language support, either in their local school, an Intensive English Centre or Intensive English High School. Some temporary resident visas are not eligible for EAL/D support. Refer to the Visa subclasses and enrolment conditions fact sheet to determine eligibility.

Primary schools

If your child recently arrived in Australia and is primary school aged, they may apply to enrol in their local primary school. The primary school provides English language support. There is no primary school Intensive English Centre.

In certain cases, if your child is in Year 6 and 11 years of age by 31 July in the current year, they may be enrolled in an Intensive English Centre or Intensive English High School after Term 1 in preparation for high school the following year. Refer to additional conditions applying to high school students for enrolment.

For more information on EAL/D support for your child, speak to your school principal, or visit:

Secondary schools

If your child recently arrived in Australia and is high school aged, they may apply to an Intensive English Centre or the Central Sydney Intensive English High School. These centres provide short-term intensive English and high school preparation programs for students before they enrol in high school.

If your child is enrolling in a high school outside the Sydney metropolitan, Wollongong, or Armidale areas where Intensive English Centres are not available, they may receive intensive English support at their local high school.

Conditions

For high school aged children to be eligible for enrolment in an Intensive English Centre or Intensive English High School, the child must:

- have intention to continue education in a NSW government high school after the completion of the intensive English course.
- apply for IEC/IEHS enrolment within six months of arriving in Australia.
- speak a language other than English as their first language and require intensive EAL/D tuition to enable them to participate in secondary education.
- be a permanent resident or approved temporary resident. Refer to the Visa subclasses and enrolment conditions fact sheet to determine eligibility.

Community language programs

Some primary schools provide community language programs in over 60 languages spoken in the Australian community. These community language programs vary between schools, and the availability of particular languages depends on the number of students who wish to study them.

Some languages are also available for study in high schools, up to the Higher School Certificate level. High school students may also enrol in the Saturday School of Community Languages to study their home language if that language is not available at their school.
